Barley Snyder opened an office in downtown Gettysburg about one year ago and is now expanding which will more than triple the size of its office in the Adams County seat. The expansion in Gettysburg allows the hiring of additional attorneys and staff at the office at 123 Baltimore Street. The move has come shortly after longtime Gettysburg attorney Robert L. McCuaide joined the firm. McCuaide has moved to the new office on October 15. He adds a new, local aspect to Barley Snyder’s current success in Adams County.

MEMBER SPOTLIGHT
RALPH SERPE | ADAMS COUNTY COMMUNITY FOUNDATION

Tell us about your business.
The Adams County Community Foundation was created to promote and facilitate charitable giving and to build a permanent endowment that will invest in the communities of Adams County forever. Each year, donors help us grow that endowment, The Fund for Adams County. We also work with individuals, families, and businesses to help them create their own charitable funds within the Community Foundation so they can support what is most important to them. We also produce The Giving Spree, Adams County’s annual day of giving. This year, 80 nonprofits will welcome more than one thousand donors on November 8, 2018 from 4-7 p.m. at the Gettysburg Area Middle School, to help us raise hundreds of thousands to benefit Adams County.

What are your primary responsibilities?
My primary responsibilities are to ensure our values: accountability, transparency, confidentiality, compassion, inclusiveness, and excellence are an integral part of our day to day operations. Our core work centers on philanthropic advising and charitable fund administration.

How do you stay engaged with industry trends?
We plan for and make the time to stay engaged. The Community Foundation field is incredibly collaborative and we take advantage of that openness. We are active members of statewide and national networks that focus on the organization and our individual responsibilities. We’re also careful to listen to our community of donors to gauge whether industry trends resonates with them.

What motivates you to jump out of bed every morning?
Philanthropic advising is, all at once, meaningful, exciting, and healing. Helping people create and give shape to their charitable legacy is a gift that always inspires.

Do you have any advice for new business owners?
Invest in people first, technology second.

What leadership advice would you offer to other business and organization leaders?
Find a way to incorporate endowed community philanthropy into your business plan. It's good for business; it's good for the community, and it feels good.

As a business in Adams County, how do you give back to the local community?
We help people create the charitable legacy they want for the communities they love. It’s our business to give back to the local community.

When you’re not working, where in Adams County do you spend your time?
If you can’t find me in the office, look for me at the pie counter at Hollabaugh’s, with friends at the Gettysburg Rotary, or attending one of Adams County’s harvest festivals.

CHUCK SZAROWSKI SR., OWNER | CRS INSURANCE, INC.

Tell us about your business.
CRS Insurance, Inc. is a firm of proven professionals; caring and conscientious people, the kind you can depend on. We are committed to maintaining a high standard of excellence in all that we do and to establishing a firm relationship of mutual trust and service with each of our clients.

What are your primary responsibilities?
For almost 30 years we have been Adams County’s independent insurance agents. We sell Erie Insurance and are bonded messengers with the PA Department of Transportation providing Adams County with notary, tag and title services. The second generation has already been working here for nearly 30 years.

How do you stay engaged with industry trends?
We set ourselves apart by providing exceptional service and being insurance advisors rather than “sales people.”

What motivates you to jump out of bed every morning?
The team at CRS Insurance has years of insurance experience allowing us to offer the proper solution to your insurance needs. Knowing what questions to ask will allow us to make sure you have the protection you expect while taking the time to make sure you understand the coverage you have. As a family owned business, we connect with our clients building long term relationships.

Do you have any advice for new business owners?
Adams County is a great place to do business because it is growing but the communities always maintain the small-town feel. There is something special about communities that support each other, just like the Gettysburg Adams Chamber does.

What leadership advice would you offer to other business and organization leaders?
The Chamber has been a great source of networking and has always been very supportive of our efforts to grow our business.

As a business in Adams County, how do you give back to the local community?
We try to donate to and sponsor all organizations and school activities that ask for our support. It’s difficult because there are so many worthy causes. We also organized and ran the Stacy Hobbs Memorial Benefit for three years and we can proudly say it raised $70,000 that was split evenly between Pink Out and the Adams County Breast Cancer Coalition.
As a pastor, I am always interested in encouraging our people to live a full and meaningful life with deep commitments to Christian faith. This is much more than attending our church’s Sunday worship services and being involved in the programs and ministry of our congregation. Ideally, our people incultate their Christian faith into every aspect of their lives. Of course, this should include our work lives. People with full-time professional positions spend an enormous amount of time, passion, and energy at work. As a pastor, I hope that the life of faith which we promote and nurture at church also seamlessly flows into our work lives. Here are some ways to make that happen:

RESPECT

I believe that as soon as we begin to discuss ways our Christian faith moves into our public and professional lives, we need to talk about respect for difference. We need a solid and heartfelt foundation of respect for all the people with whom we work, interact, and relate regularly. In a culture like ours with such deep freedom, there is a mind-boggling diversity of expressions of religions, faith, and moral commitments. Simply consider how many different styles, approaches, and tones to our common Christian faith. Many of these differences are profound. Importantly, people are also free to have no faith or religious commitments. This also deserves respect. Respect for difference is a tone, a presence, and a deep authentic commitment that comes from our heart and soul.

GRATITUDE

Meaningfully saying, “thank you” is a powerful statement. The ability to say, “thank you,” is recognizing opportunities for thanking others and most of all, living with an attitude of gratitude will enhance all our personal relationships particularly at work. I like to preach that “thank you” should always be our first prayer. It is important not to be cute and trite about it. Gratitude is a way of looking at the world which seeks to recognize and appreciate the contributions of others. Gratitude builds teams, encourages relationships and creates a tone of mutuality and acceptance.

ACTIVE LISTENING

A wise Sunday school teacher I had when I was a young boy often said, when she wanted our class to sit still and listen, that God created us with two ears and one mouth. That means, we should listen twice as much as we speak. We need to listen first. We all have experienced the power of simply being heard of another person who took the time and made the concentrated effort to listen. The basis of pastoral counseling and also of professional therapy is active listening. Let the preachers preach on Sunday morning in church. At work all week, we should commit ourselves to deep, active listening. Listening is a learned skill we must practice. Can you work with someone if you do not truly, deeply, authentically listen? There is a paradox here: the better we learn to listen, the more significant will be our words when we speak.

What would happen if people of faith made a heartfelt, lasting commitment to respecting others, living with gratitude and active listening? As I write this, it feels in part that these ideas are basic and elementary. Are not these things we learned in kindergarten? But, sadly it seems we did not learn them very well. Our culture and especially our public and political life has deteriorated to the point where these ageless teachings—respect, gratitude, and listening—have been trampled by our bickering and derivitive rancor. Maybe we need a restart, a renewal, a reboot. Try it today at your work: a renewed commitment to respect, gratitude, and listening.

Keeping Deadly Fentanyl Out of the U.S.

PA Senator Toomey

U.S. Senators Pat Toomey and Doug Jones (D-Ala.) are proposing new penalties on foreign countries that overcook drug kingpins who export deadly fentanyl to the U.S. The bipartisan Blocking Deadly Fentanyl Imports Act would make American foreign aid contingent upon a recipient country cooperating with U.S. drug enforcement efforts relating to fentanyl. Under this, a fentanyl-producing nation would lose access to the Export-Import Bank and be ineligible for other U.S. taxpayer-subsidized aid if it fails to cooperate with the U.S. on narcotics control. “The opioid and heroin epidemic has become increasingly lethal in part due to the widespread presence of illicit fentanyl,” said Toomey. “Fentanyl can be fifty times as potent as heroin, just a tiny amount of this dangerous substance can kill a person, including first responders who may be inadvertently exposed to the drug when responding to an overdose victim or a crime scene. For the sake of our communities and the safety of law enforcement, countries like China must stop illicitly exporting fentanyl and improve their drug enforcement efforts now.” “Like many places across the country, Alabama is in the midst of a substance abuse and overdose crisis, in part because of dangerous synthetic substances like fentanyl,” said Jones. “Fentanyl not only harms those who use it, but it also poses a serious threat to our first responders should they be exposed. This legislation is another smart step to stop illicit fentanyl from being transported across our borders and into our communities.” This requires the State Department to identify in its annual report on narcotics trafficking those countries that are major producers of fentanyl. This is in place for countries that are major sources of heroin, cocaine, and methamphetamine.

Celebrating Small Businesses

PA Representative Dan Moul

As a state representative, I have had the pleasure of attending numerous grand openings and ribbon-cutting ceremonies for small businesses in our area. While this may seem a minor part of what I do, it is certainly not trivial. Small businesses create most of the jobs in this Commonwealth and should be celebrated, encouraged and given every opportunity for success. In Harrisburg, I work to pass business-friendly legislation aimed at easing the way for new and existing businesses as well as attracting and keeping these important job creators — both large and small. I have supported reforms aimed at cutting job-crushing government red tape and burdensome regulations while maintaining important health and safety measures. In addition to important workers’ compensation reforms, I supported the Small Business Tax Fairness package to permit tax deferrals in certain like-kind exchanges, an expense deduction for the cost of certain business property, and a one-stop shop for permitting. These bills, which are now awaiting Senate action, are just a sample of the work I do on behalf of Pennsylvania businesses, and the reason the National Federation of Independent Business recently presented me with its Champion of Small Business Award.

Small Business Advantage Program

PA Senator Alloway

Grant funding for energy efficiency and pollution prevention projects for small business owners and farmers are still available from the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) through the Small Business Advantage Grant program. “This grant was created with small businesses and farmers in mind. There are tremendous monetary savings available to Pennsylvania’s small business entrepreneurs by installing energy efficient equipment, such as LED lighting, and Energy Star rated HVAC and boilers,” said Secretary Patrick McDonnell. “Pennsylvania farmers can also benefit from this grant by receiving support for undertaking projects to help them divert sediment and nutrient runoff from our waterways.” “The Small Business Advantage grants are a tremendous opportunity for farmers to continue their stewardship of the land,” said Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Secretary Russell Redding. “Better soil retention, cleaner water, and a healthier environment benefit all Pennsylvanians, and I encourage farmers to take a look at their own operations to see where one of these grants could help out.” Pennsylvania-based small business owners with 100 or fewer full-time employees are eligible for the grants. Projects must save the business a minimum of $500 and 25% annually in energy consumption, or pollution related expenses. Natural resource protection projects are exempt from the minimums, however the projects must be able to quantify sediment and nutrient reductions into nearby waterways. Businesses can apply for 50% matching funds for equipment or materials, up to $9,500, when adopting energy-efficient or pollution prevention equipment or processes. Applications are considered on a first come, first served basis, and will be accepted until fiscal year 2018-19 funds are exhausted, or April 12, whichever occurs first. The complete grant application package is available by visiting the DEP Small Business Ombudsman’s Office website.
